

The first quarter of 2023 was a financial rollercoaster. A record January for stocks gradually eroded as inflation metrics refused to decline and the Federal Reserve maintained its hawkish rhetoric. The failure of Silicon Valley Bank and forced closure of Signature Bank caught markets off-guard and led to a sharp rise in risk sentiment. A broader bank crisis has been averted for now, but the upshot is likely higher borrowing costs and a mild recession later this year.

Imprudence by bankers and regulators was the proximate cause for the current banking crisis. However, the crisis has its roots in the aggressive fiscal and monetary moves undertaken during the pandemic. Starting about a year ago, the Federal Reserve (Fed) began raising the Federal Funds Rate to raise the cost of capital and nip inflation. This rate hiking cycle has dealt several blows to banks in the form of an inverted yield curve, bond losses, and lower bank deposits, a highly unusual occurrence. The combination will weigh on banks' willingness and ability to lend going forward.

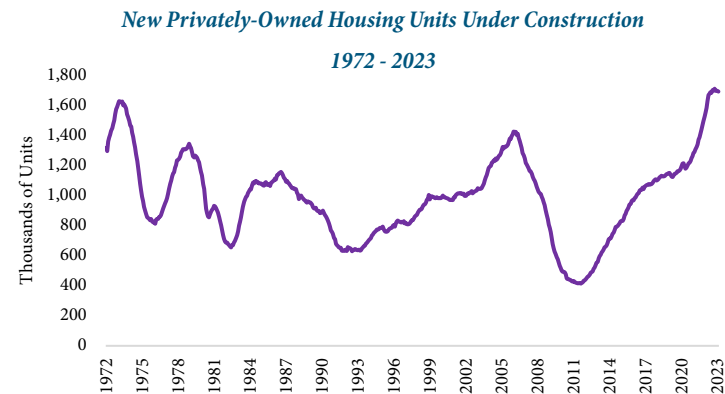

Source: Bloomberg March 2023

Source: Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System March 2023

Current measures of economic activity are mixed. The labor market, vital to economic stability and growth, remains strong. While there continues to be a mismatch between available jobs and willing workers, the gap is narrowing. Consumer balance sheets are beginning to show some weakness but broadly remain healthy. The nascent re-shoring of manufacturing, combined with aspirational goals of a sustainable economy, bode well for capital spending. On the other hand, leading economic indicators have broadly contracted over the last 12 months, and the inversion between the 2-year and 10-year Treasury yield persists, suggesting growth may be challenged later in the year.

Inflation appears to be on a downward trajectory, though it remains far above the Fed's 2% target. Getting there will take time, probably years, and progress will not be linear. Housing costs are a significant contributor to inflation. As a nation, we have underinvested in housing for decades. Increased demand during the pandemic, fueled by historically low mortgage rates, collided with a lack of housing to spike shelter inflation. The sharp increase in house values has stalled, but it will take at least a few more months for price stability to be reflected in the CPI. Housing stock needs to expand and will as there are more than 1.7 million housing units under construction, by far the most since 1973.

Source: U.S. Census Bureau & U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development March 2023

The global economic picture is equally murky. China's pandemic re-opening is gathering steam but is overshadowed in the U. S. by geopolitics and security concerns about Chinese owned social networker Tik Tok. While the continuing Russian invasion of Ukraine looms in the background, Europe has fared far better than feared. A mild winter helped contain fuel prices despite curtailed Russian supplies and continental Europe is investing to supplement its energy and power grids.

The outlook for corporate earnings in 2024 and the 10-year Treasury yield will likely determine the course for stocks this year. Earnings in 2023 are expected to be largely uninspiring. Many retail and consumer companies have suggested they cannot raise prices, and protecting profit margins has taken on increased importance. Inventory investments have reversed as supply chains recover - double ordering has given way to destocking. Technology companies have laid off workers in anticipation of a slowdown this year. Others have delayed projects or re-instituted fiscal discipline in their daily operations. These steps set the stage for a revenue and earnings recovery in 2024. In the interim, the stock market's valuation of approximately 16x earnings is reasonable, as investors de-emphasize current year earnings and focus on the potential for a robust rebound next year.

While bond yields dropped commensurate with the bank crisis, the long period of declining interest rates from the late 1970's - 2021 is over. Rates are likely range bound even with heightened volatility as strong demand for income persists after a period of unusually low rates. We believe the short- to intermediate-term offers the most attractive risk/reward, and we continue to find opportunities to increase yield while maintaining quality.

Largely under the radar, the U.S. has hit its legislated $34.1 trillion debt ceiling. History suggests that the limit will be raised, allowing the U.S. to avoid default on existing debt and to issue new debt. We expect Congress to raise the limit in late summer but only after acrimonious negotiations and risk of default. Stocks and bonds are likely to react negatively should Congress fail to act before September.

The range of potential intermediate-term economic outcomes remains wide, but recession odds have increased with recent events. As should be clear by now, neither the Fed nor the economic establishment understand the full implications of the aggressive fiscal and monetary moves undertaken during the pandemic. While uncertainty abounds, we remain confident that a focus on high-quality companies will allow investors to weather any coming storms and benefit from continued market strength.

Investment Oversight Committee
Daniel A. Lagan, CFA, Chief Investment Officer

U.S. National Debt Ceiling Increases
2000 - 2023

Source: Office of Management and Budget March 2023

CONGRESS ASSET
MANAGEMENT COMPANY

2 Seaport Lane Boston MA 02210 800.234.4516 www.congressasset.com